STORROW A CANDIDATE

James J. Storrow will be a candidate for Mayor. He made this announcement this afternoon. Friends of reform finally induced him to make the race.

Mr. Storrow's candidacy will be in the hands of the big Citizens' Committee of 750. It is expected that all of the reform elements will be massed to back him. This will make formidable fighters for the mayoralty chair in Mr. Storrow and John F. Fitzgerald.

This is Mr. Storrow's statement:

I have been asked during the last few days by a number of citizens whether I would be a candidate for Mayor. It therefore seems proper that I should define my position.

I am in favor of the best man that may be put forward, whoever he may be, and I am ready to support him to the best of my ability. I regard the office as a great responsibility, and a great honor. If I am asked to be a candidate for Mayor of Boston by a group of citizens fully and fairly representative of all its elements I shall consider it a duty and be glad to do so.

JAMES J. STORROW.

Three more men entered the race for mayoralty nominations in Boston to-day. They are:

Edward L. Logan, associate judge of the South Boston District Court and member of Governor Draper's military staff.

James P. Macenta, member of the School Committee.

Peter J. Connolly of Ward 17. Refused to tell whom he represented.

With these new members of the "Want-to-Be Mayor" Club, its known membership now stands at twenty-one.

Chairman Frederick J. Brand of the Board of Aldermen, who is now in New York on business, to-day sent the following telegram for publication:

"Correct statement in newspapers that I have decided to withdraw from mayoralty contest and enter City Council fight, will be a candidate for Mayor until the votes are counted next January, and feel confident that I will be returned a winner."

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara, who was suggested by certain Republicans as a possible candidate for Mayor, said to-day:

"I know nothing about this except what I have read in the papers."

It is believed by many at police headquarters that Commissioner O'Meara, whose term expires this year, will not be reappointed by Governor Draper, and that

ITHACANS CHEERED BY 30,000

THE STADIUM, Soldiers' Field, Nov. 6.—Harvard and Cornell met on the gridiron this afternoon. When the teams trotted on the field up from the valley of the great Stadium rose the cheers of over 30,000 people. Bands boomed forth the stirring anthems of Harvard and Cornell, and the colors of the rival colleges waved defiance at each other across the white-lined battlefield.

Gilly gowned ladies chatted merrily with the college men and the cold grey amphitheatre was transformed into a kaleidoscope of color. The clear blue skies and the cool crisp air lent encouragement to the fray.

It was a critical day for both teams. Each player was keyed up to the highest tension. Every man realized that he must play for all that was in him. It was contest of brain and brawn and the advantage was with Harvard, for Cornell had been defeated twice by Williams and by Fordham.

Society Out in Force.

Society people from Boston, New York and all over New England were out in force. The debutante of the season and her attentive fiancee sat side by side with the chaperon, a society leader perhaps of national fame.

Hours before the game the thousands of spectators began to arrive, cabs, automobiles and street cars bringing them to the great battlefield. The capacity of the cars was taxed to the utmost and they crawled like snails. The old bridge, which has been the silent spectator of so many dramas and so few victories for the Crimson, again resounded to the tramp of thousands. The stands began quickly to fill and soon the crowds were assembled impatient for the opening whistle.

New Rules Under Fire.

It was a special day. The new football rules had already crept under suspicion as a result of the sad event at West Point last Saturday, and football experts and heads of colleges from all the East came to see for themselves just what quarrel was involved in the playing of this most absorbing of college sports. President Lowell of Harvard watched each play keenly.

The speculators laid their plans early to get a golden harvest, and all up and down Washington street in Boston and along the route to the Stadium they were plying their trade. Tickets for the best parts of the field sold as high as $5 apiece.

O'Connor, the South Boston boy, was the centre of much interest as Harvard's team. He played opposite to Lothrop Withington on the Crimson.

Corbett, the great dodging back of the Crimson team, was missed in the opening lineup, but the Harvard eleven was greatly strengthened by the return of McKay, the 200-pound left tackle.

Harvard team came on the field at 2:22 followed immediately by the Cornell team. The advent of both teams was greeted by vociferous applause.

The teams went through a short signal practice. Tydemen and Simson sent up some good spirals to Hoffman. The Harvard and Cornell bands vied with each other in playing college airs. Harvard's new song, "Hurrah for Harvard," and "Harvard Triumph" brought forth great applause.

FIRST HALF.

The whistle blew at 2:31. Seagrave kicked off short to Fisher at Harvard's 25-yard line. Fisher ran it to Harvard's 40-yard line. Smith went around left end to Harvard's 45-yard line. Harvard was penalized ten yards to the 30-yard line for offside play. Harvard failed to get in, and Minot punted to Baker at Cornell's 45-yard line.

Hoffman made two yards around right end. Fish nailed an outside kick by Baker. Simson, tackling him at Cornell's 47-yard line. Smith went through left tackle to Cornell's 45-yard line. Leslie went through right tackle for Cornell's 40-yard line. Minot made first down through centre to Cornell's 35-yard line. Leslie went through left guard to Cornell's 33-yard line. Minot smashed through right guard to Cornell's 30-yard line.

Fish's Costly Fumble.

O'Flaherty made a forward pass to Fish who fumbled, Tydemen recovering the ball for Cornell on Cornell's 20-yard line. Simson punted to O'Flaherty, who ran back ten far and was nailed at Harvard's 45-yard line. Minot went through centre to Harvard's 33-yard line. Minot plunged through big holes in right guard to Cornell's 45-yard line. A 12-yard gain, Leslie through a hole made by McKay for a gain of fifteen yards to middle-field. McKay tried left tackle, but slipped, making only three yards. Minot with five men on his back, smashed Cornell's centre to Cornell's 35-yard line. He was able to gain only two yards through centre on the next play.

A forward pass, O'Flaherty to Smith, was fumbled and declared illegal, the ball being brought back to middle-field. O'Flaherty's onside kick was blocked by Simson, Hoffman recovering the ball for Cornell on Harvard's 45-yard line.

DELOREY'S "CONFESSION" IS NARRATED BY STATE DETECTIVE

The story of the killing of Annie Mullins as the police declare it was told to them by Peter C. Delorey, was repeated from the witness stand in the Suffolk criminal court this afternoon by State Detective Charles E. Byrnes. The graphic recital was listened to intently by Delorey and Jim's Mantir, on trial for the murder.

Delorey, according to Byrnes and it is understood the defense will deny the alleged confession—told how he and Mantir met Annie Mullins in the street and she spoke to them, apparently under the belief that she knew them. They walked with her. She wanted to leave and go home because it was late. They looked and pulled her from the street into Squire's Field. Each and hold of an arm.

Delorey got tired of the pursuit of the girl and Mantir was ahead of him with her. Mantir hurled her to the ground. Delorey heard her cry out and moan. Then Guy ran from the field. Mantir said he had cut her throat and swore Delorey to secrecy. That, in brief, is the story Detective Byrnes testified that Delorey told.

Byrnes said that Delorey had been told that what he said would be used against him in court and that he told the story without coercion, although he admitted that the prisoner had been taken out of his cell three times to get all the details.

Detective Byrnes testified that Delorey's story was as follows:

Mantir With Him.

"I left the farm in West Billerica at 9 o'clock in the morning of March 27, last year. I intended to get work in the market Friday afternoon and Saturday. I asked my aunt if I could bring Mantir along with me and she said that I could. I left Mantir at Arlington Heights. He went right along to Boston in the car that we came down in while I went first to my home.

"We agreed to meet at 8 o'clock that night in Sullivan square. I went down to the market where I had been employed and saw Mr. Harding. He told me that as I had told him the week before that I was going to my aunt's farm for several months that my job was my place and not nothing for me to do. This was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. I spent the rest of the day around Boston and at 8 o'clock was in Sullivan square where I had agreed to meet Mantir.

"Mantir was there and we took a car down to Teele square. Then we walked down Cameron street to Massachusetts avenue and up to Porter station. Then we walked down the avenue and up again to Porter station.

Met Annie Mullins.

"Here we met the girl. She said, 'Hello.' We both said, 'Hello.' I think the girl thought that she knew us when she first spoke to us. We had two or three minutes conversation. Then we asked her if she would take a walk. She consented. We went up Massachusetts avenue to the Monument, almost to Arlington centre.

Then we crossed over to the other side of the street. We were all in pretty good humor and that it was getting late and she must go home.

"After crossing near the monument we walked back on the other side and walked back Massachusetts avenue to Marathon street. When we reached Massachusetts avenue all of us had hold of one of the girl's arms or hands. I don't remember.

"We started down Marathon street. The girl did not want to go. She seemed to be tired out, but we did not use much force. Then we came to an open lot with many houses. The girl did not want to go any further and we pulled and coaxed her again. By this time I was getting sick myself.

"I stood still then and Mantir went ahead six or eight feet with the girl. I saw him throw her down. I heard her scream. I ran up. Then I saw him get up. He started to run and I started to run with him. We got to Massachusetts avenue. Mantir's hands were covered with blood."

Pledged to Secrecy.

"Then we walked up to Arlington Centre. We met one man between the field and Arlington Centre. We then walked to Arlington Heights meeting one man between Arlington Centre and Arlington Heights. When we got to Arlington Centre, Jim made me hold up my hand and swear that I would not tell anyone about it. I started to cry. I said to him, 'If you killed her you will be held for murder.'

We then walked to Billerica, arriving at my aunt's farm between 8 and 6:30 Saturday morning.

During this recital Mantir leaned eagerly forward over the rail of his cage. This is the second time that his calm manner has been broken. The other time was when the blood-stained clothing of the dead girl was being exhibited to the jury. Delorey leaned back against the prisoner's cage, trembling and attitude through out the testimony.

"Never then said," State Officer Byrne continued, "when we got back to my aunt's home I was warning my hands and Mantir was paying the room where my aunt came in. She said, 'Hello, boys, what are you doing?' I told her that we were not coming back until Sunday night. I then told her that there was a terrible murder down in Arlington, near where one of Jim's friends lived. She asked me if I knew who it was and I told her that it was Jim's friend. She said that it was a Cambridge girl. He asked me if I had a paper and I said, 'No, not early.

Startled by Sweater.

"Then after relating this story Delorey said, 'Gentlemen, this is the truth. It is all I know. So help me God.'

"Peter was then locked in a cell. About five minutes later, Lieutenant Gordon got the grey sweater and showed it to Mantir's table. Mantir was brought in and seated next to the table. Mantir saw the sweater and appeared nervous. Lieutenant Gordon said, 'Jim, you know what this is.' Mantir don't you like the looks of it?' Mantir replied, 'No had any use for it.' Lieutenant Gordon then said, 'Mantir, Peter Delorey and Mantir was there and we took a car down to Teele square. Then we walked down Cameron street to Massachusetts avenue and up to Porter station. Then we walked down the avenue and up again to Porter station.

Met Annie Mullins.

"Here we met the girl. She said, 'Hello.' We both said, 'Hello.' I think the girl thought that she knew us when she first spoke to us. We had two or three minutes conversation. Then we asked her if she would take a walk. She consented. We went up Massachusetts avenue to the Monument, almost to Arlington centre.

Then we crossed over to the other side of the street. We were all in pretty good humor and that it was getting late and she must go home.

Pledged to Secrecy.

"Then we walked up to Arlington Centre. We met one man between the field

WITNESSES TRAPPED IN TESTIMONY ABOUT STEINHEIL MURDERS

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Victorious in the three-day battle on the witness stand in which she held to her story against the fusillade of the prosecution, Mme. Marguerite Steinheil, "the red widow of France," now to-day's session of her trial open with another success. Remy Couillard, the valet, in whose packet she placed a pearl ring after the murder of her husband and her stepmother, Mme. Japy, was the first witness called by the prosecution. The defence riddled his story.

Dropping to her knees Mme. Steinheil implored the forgiveness of Couillard while he was contradicting himself on the stand and besought him to tell the truth. The defence scored telling points against Couillard, on whom the prosecution placed its chief reliance.

The crowd in court seemed to enjoy the valet's discomfiture. Couillard's story not only varied greatly from that he gave before the police in the first days of the mysterious case, but was in opposition to the testimony of other witnesses, particularly that contained in the deposition of the engineer, Lecoeq, who is now in America.

When Mme. Steinheil begged the valet to forgive her attempts to endanger him, he replied haughtily: "It is not a question of forgiving. I am here to give my testimony and to let the law take its course."

Under the clever questioning of Maître Aubin, the valet got into hot water time and again.

Tried to Steal a Stamp.

The valet's testimony throughout the time he was on the stand was shifty. He admitted not mailing a letter which was given him before the crime by Mlle. Marthe Steinheil, the accused woman's daughter. This letter, which was found by a reporter in Couillard's pocketbook just after the strange crime, was addressed to the young army officer to whom Mlle. Steinheil was at that time engaged.

"I did not mail the letter because I wanted to steal the stamp," was the valet's lame excuse.

Pressed by M. Aubin he became excited and cried: "Yes, I opened it, but I did not read it. I swear I did not look at it."

This letter is of importance as showing the situation in the Steinheil household before the double murder.

Mme. Steinheil's pleasure at the effect of Couillard's answers and divergent testimony was evident to all in the court room. She laughed quietly in a mocking fashion when he was making his errors.

Although her ordeal of torture on the witness stand had ended—for a time at least—it was clear to-day that Mme. Steinheil was still a target for terrific batteries from the prosecution. But the real skirmish with Couillard—probably the most important of the State's witnesses—received well for the second woman.

When the session opened in the court of the assizes to-day, M. Demilien, the presiding judge whose attack on the defence value.

POSITIVE AS TO HOW GIRL DIED

Court opened at 9:25 a. m. Mantir and Delorey were in their places in the prisoner's cage promptly at 9 o'clock, but Judge White was delayed in getting to the courthouse, and court did not start until twenty-five minutes later.

Mantir and Delorey were cheerful and chatted pleasantly with the deputy sheriffs as they were brought into court. Mantir's attorneys discussed a good night and slept soundly. They ate heartily when their breakfast was served.

Except for the second Middlesex District, the witnesses today, testimony of the recalled Medical Examiner Swan in regard to forming the autopsy on the body of Annie Mullins. He was questioned by District Attorney Higgins.

Q.—Did you model Dr. Swan in making the autopsy on the body of Annie Mullins in Hartwell's undertaking rooms at Arlington? A.—I did.

Q.—Describe what you saw. A.—There was found on the floor, lying on the right hand glove, the right wrist and sleeve and on the front of her clothing a portion of the blood color of the jacket was cut. The extreme edge of the linen collar was cut. These two cuts on both collars were made by a very sharp instrument. There were no other marks of violence about the body except the four cuts on the left side of the neck.

Q.—Assuming that Annie Mullins was left-handed, could she have inflicted these wounds on herself with her left hand? A.—Yes, she could.

Attorney Winslow then asked on cross-examination:

Q.—Is there anything about this case which leads you to believe whether it was homicide or suicide? A.—I do not know.

Q.—How long after this woman had gotten did she come to her death? A.—Not more than one hour and not less than half.

Q.—Is it a fact, Doctor, that there was no indication of any other struggle about the house than the cutting of the throat? A.—That was all.

Attorney Higgins then asked:

Q.—Mr. Winslow has asked you whether the wounds inflicted could be those of suicide or homicide, and you have stated that there was nothing which would indicate either way. Now what did you understand by that question? A.—The body as I saw it when I made the autopsy.

Q.—You didn't have in mind the evidence introduced here, did you? A.—No.

Q.—Would it make any difference to your mind that no weapon was found? A.—No.

Attorney Winslow objected to the question and it was excluded.

Q.—Are the inflictions which distinguish suicidal from homicidal wounds? A.—The wounds themselves.

Attorney Winslow then cross-examined:

Q.—Is the character of blood such that we have no means of distinguishing one person's blood from another's? A.—They wouldn't be the same, but we couldn't distinguish the difference.

Q.—Were you told what this garment was when Mr. Gordon brought it to you? A.—No.

Q.—You knew what you were to look for did you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know that you were to look for blood? A.—I did.

Q.—Woman's blood? A.—No, sir, simply blood.

Animal and Human Blood.

Q.—How long had the blood been on this garment? A.—I couldn't say except that it was on there more than a few days.

Q.—Couldn't you tell whether it had been there a day, a year or a few days? A.—It was there at least a week. I can't say more definitely than that.

Q.—Are there not some animals in which blood is corpuscles cannot be determined from human blood corpuscles? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Are there not some animals in which blood is the same as the blood is the same as the serum of the human blood? A.—No, sir. These questions by the defence indicated that an attempt might be made to show that the blood on the sweater were not made by human blood.

WHITNEY TESTIFIES TO BLOOD STAINS

Professor William F. Whitney, the celebrated physicist of Harvard College was the next witness. He was questioned by District-Attorney Higgins. He testified that he found blood spots on the grey sweater, alleged to have been worn by Mantir, and which was taken from the farm of Mrs. Delorey at Billerica.

Attorney Winslow objected to the introduction of testimony from Professor Whitney as it had not been proven that the sweater belonged to Mantir. He was restrict-attorney said that he would put Lieutenant Gordon on the witness stand on the stand later, and that the police official would identify the sweater and tell how Mantir admitted to him that the sweater was his. Judge White ruled and the questioning of Professor Whitney to continue.

Unnerved by Sweater.

As Professor Whitney took the stand he carried the stained sweater in his hands, gently caught Mantir's eye, and Mantir for the first time displayed excitement and emotion. He put his fingers to his mouth, ruffled it and was restless. His lips twitched and he gazed intently upon the blood-stained sweater. Then he looked at the floor.

Q.—When did you receive this sweater? A.—On April 9th, 1909.

Q.—And from whom? A.—From Lieutenant Gordon of the Cambridge police.

Q.—What did you do with it? A.—I examined it carefully for suspected blood stains.

Q.—Tell the jury what you found? A.—I found the outside of the sleeves, close to the edge, I found what I considered blood stains one and one-half inches in length and three-eighths of an inch in width. I applied the tests for the presence of blood and found that the stains were those of human blood.

Professor Whitney was recalled yesterday and heard the testimony in this case where Dr. Swan described the wounds upon the body of Annie Mullins. Were you able to form an opinion of the kind of weapon used in the infliction of those wounds? A.—Yes.

Thinks Razor Used.

Q.—What kind of a weapon, in your opinion, was used? A.—It was a sharp instrument—a razor.

Attorney Winslow objected to the admission of this answer. He declared that the defence contended at the present that the wounds were made by a sharp instrument. They admitted it, he said. He did object to any witness offering an opinion that the instrument was like a razor.

Judge Fox upheld the objection.

Q.—You heard evidence yesterday, Doctor, of the location, character and depth of the wounds inflicted on Annie Mullins and that she was left-handed? A.—Yes.

Q.—Bearing this in mind are you ready to form an opinion as to whether she could have inflicted these wounds with her left hand? A.—Yes.

Q.—What is that opinion? (Attorney Winslow objected but was overruled.) A.—It is highly improbable that she could have cut herself in that way.

Q.—You didn't see the body of this woman, did you, Professor? A.—No.

Q.—Assuming that Annie Mullins was a left-handed person, that she was easily frightened, and being frightened would

This Is "Jerry" Farrar, the Latest in Hats and Her Curly, "Dutch Clip"

From a snapshot at the Symphony by a Boston American photographer.

DID YOU SEE JERRY FARRAR IN DUTCH CLIP?

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

"Jerry" Farrar, Boston's own little Jerry, certainly should feel gratified at the reception she received when she sang with the Symphony orchestra at Symphony Hall and she is, for she told me so.

I saw her for a few moments after she had held her audience entranced while she sang to it in her clear, beautiful voice. Arne's recitative, "These Joyous Airs," and aria, "O Time That is No More," from Dennee's lyric scene, "The Prodigal Son."

She is just the same sweet, unaffected Geraldine as of old, and when she first appeared before her audience there was a general look of approval, for she certainly did look a picture.

She's of medium height, slender and dark, with marvelously beautiful eyes, a rounded cherub like face and the sweetest of smiles, so in her beautifully wrought gown of white chamoise, embroidered in gold and silver, clinging close to the figure and draped in at the knee, and her decidedly chic Madame De Stael turban of golden velvet with champagne colored plumes, she could hardly help looking the modern beauty.

But that wasn't all—she wore white camelias and carried a muff, an immense one, one of the largest creations known as the Labrador, and measuring, well, I'd be afraid to say, but it certainly was the largest I've ever seen.

But what puzzled me—what caught my eye first and held it to the last—was the style of her coiffure, from the audience it looked exactly like the Dutch clip worn by the children, but when I saw her to talk with, after her songs, I discovered that the curls were tiny short curls all around her head—truly the Dutch clip, only a tightly curled one.

I happen to know that her gown, hat, and muff were the very VERY latest, so I presume her style of hair dressing was the thing that we're coming to the curled Dutch clip.

But if it were as becoming to the rest of us as it is to Miss Farrar I should say, "Let it come—the sooner the better." For with her pretty round face framed in these curls she looked like a very young and beautiful child.

At any rate it Miss Farrar had but come to the front of the stage, made her gracious little bow and bestowed upon the audience one of her alluring smiles—and all of the women rise to set a few points on the latest in millinery and gowns. I do believe that most of those present would have left their seats and rushed over the hill-heads who had been standing in line since morning.

But she sang—sang as she never sang in Boston before, and the audience refused to be satisfied. She was forced to come out again and again, but not to sing, since it is against the rules of the Symphony to allow the artists to respond to encores.

At any rate it was a well satisfied lot of people that left the hall after the concert and all the women at least could be heard discussing with the pretty little prima donna and her voice.

She has certainly given her old friends in Boston (and for Dorothy and I'm anxious to see in fact shall wait with bated breath and watch for Boston—dear old Boston, to adopt the Farrar style of hair dressing).

Miss Farrar will sing at the Symphony concert in Symphony Hall again tonight.

HOTEL GUESTS IMPERILED IN $50,000 FIRE

WESTBORO, Nov. 6.—Twenty guests in the Reservoir Hotel at Woodville, a village three miles from here, were driven to the street in their nightclothing early today by a $50,000 fire that totally destroyed the hotel, the carriage factory and repository, owned by L. E. Coolidge.

All of the guests narrowly escaped with their lives, as the hotel was burning for fifteen minutes before the fire was discovered by a woman who lived across the street, who was awakened by the crackling of the flames.

The large carriage repository and factory adjoin the hotel and both buildings were nearly burned to the ground before the fire was discovered.

Everyone in the hotel was asleep, and as there is no watchman or night clerk on duty, the guest were ignorant of the danger.

The fire bell on the Town Hall was rung and all of the town's volunteers rushed to the scene. The fire had gained great headway, and as there was a strong wind, none of the streams of water that were leveled on the blaze had any effect.

Help was summoned at once from Hopkinton and Westboro and engines arrived too late to be of any aid.

A SUNDAY AMERICAN want advt. is often the road to fortune.

THINK BRUHM ONE OF BANDIT PAIR IN CANADA

Deputy Superintendent Watts thinks that the two men held in Halifax, Nova Scotia, on the charge of attacking George Foote, cashier at the Dartmouth Rope Works, with intent to rob him of $3,000, may be Clyde G. Bruhm and Harry Wingate, for whom the police have searched far and wide.

They are chums and are wanted on a breaking and entering charge. Wingate lives on the North Shore. Bruhm is the man who made the sensational escape from the Boston city prison one night but consumer and is supposed to have gotten into Canada.

Deputy Superintendent Watts said today: "I think the men under arrest in Nova Scotia may be Bruhm and Wingate. According to what I have read in the newspapers about the crime they are accused of, it would only be attempted by desperate men with strong nerve. I have wired the Halifax police to hold the prisoners until we can get and examine photographs of them."

Captured by Posse.

The Halifax prisoners were caught after the attack upon Cashier Foote, who thinks they would have killed him to get possession of $3,000, by a posse of police and citizens in the woods about three miles from the scene of the crime.

It is said that young men of the names given by the prisoners have been employed as collectors in this city by an insurance company. The woman who confirms the house at No. 272 Massachusetts avenue said: "Two young men named Gallagher and Hassett roomed in my house, but they left in August. Gallagher's family live in South Boston. He told me he might be found dead some day."

Had Box of Cartridges.

A brother of the Hassett who formerly roomed in this house is lodging there now. He said: "I know nothing about Gallagher, but he said he was a Spanish War veteran. A large box of rifle cartridges were found among his things. I understand Gallagher had worked as doorman in a hotel on Beacon Hill. If it is my brother and Gallagher who are under arrest I think they must have got stranded in New Sevella, and that Gallagher influenced my brother, if he has got into a scrape."

800 MIDDIES GIVE OFFICER "SILENCE"

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 6.—That stinging reprimand of superior officers known here as "the silence" was administered by 800 midshipmen at dinner to Lieutenant Wallace Hertzell, of the disciplinary department. Not a word was spoken during forty-five minutes, in a measure the rebuke hits Captain Bowyer, superintendent of the Academy, as it was through carrying out reforms ordered by him that the officers under him incurred the resentment of the middies.

NEWTON Y. M. C. A. FUND PASSES $91,000 MARK ON WAY TO $150,000

Enthusiasm bubbled up from old and young men alike last night at the completion of the third day's campaign for the new $150,000 building for the Y. M. C. A. at Newton, when it was announced that $91,043 had been raised. The site for this new building is on Chure land Oakland streets, and has been given by Frank A. Day and James E. Clark at a cost of $50,000.

Playground features will be prominent in the surroundings of the new buildings. There will be a first-class diamond, football gridiron, running track, tennis, handball and basketball courts and many other open-air attractions. The whole property will comprise six acres.

The total amount raised yesterday was $18,146. Of this Frank Hopewell, John Hopewell, John W. Weeks, Mrs. George S. Harwood, Allan C. Emery, president of the Newton Y. M. C. A., and a friend gave respectively $1,000. Five hundred came from an Unitarian friend, while Edward D. Conant, Benjamin S. Palmer, William H. Coolidge, a Friend, and Colonel E. H. Haskell each gave a like sum.

$1,000 From Allen C. Emery.

At the banquet last evening held in the hall of the association, preceding the announcement of the day's work, a letter from Allen C. Emery, when read, created a sensation and was received amid much applause. It read as follows:

"I take great pleasure in making this contribution in gratitude for all the Newton Y. M. C. A. has done for me."—Allen C. Emery.

The check was for one thousand dollars.

The different teams then gave in their daily reports. Mr. Emery described the future work of the campaign, and the work that is yet necessary. He called upon Arthur S. Johnson, president of the Boston Y. M. C. A., who said:

"It seems good to get into the game again after our experience in Boston and your work in raising this sum will be successful by your faith and courage to go ahead.

"When we were working for our fund your president was on deck to help us, and we gained his help very much. It is a great thing to bear in mind that each man has a personal responsibility in this effort, and your success will be assured by keeping this in view."

Bates Praises Work.

Jacob P. Bates, vice-president of the Boston Association, said: "This is an interesting occasion to raising money, for the last two weeks I have ever spent was in urging people to give towards this worthy cause, which certainly took hold of the people of Boston, and you will have success, for in the last three days you have got over two-thirds of the amount needed and it is a splendid testimony to the value of the cause as well as to the interest of your prominent citizens."

DESHLER WANTS TO FIGHT BATTLING NELSON FOR TITLE

HASKELL WILL WELCOME FIGHT TO OKLAHOMA

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—In a message to a "Tom" Sharkey in this city "Joe" Miller of Ponca, Okla., announced that Charles N. Haskell, Governor of Oklahoma, had sanctioned the proposition to bid for the Johnson-Jeffries fight for any number of rounds. Miller, representing "Ranch No. 101," had already offered a purse of $65,000.

"Sam" Berger, manager of James J. Jeffries, was enthusiastic yesterday when talking about the fight offers. In some secondhand way information had been received that there was a lot of interesting connected with the bids for the next championship fight.

Berger and Robert F. Murphy, stakeholder, were positive that there was nothing in the information in the latest offer of Mr. Miller. The Oklahoma promoter is expected to be in New York early next week to post a forfeit and fulfil all other matters regarding the fighters' guarantee.

There had been a little friction between the fighters and Miller Brothers because of a belief on the part of the former that there would be legal objections to a heavyweight match. The telegram from "Joe" Miller indicates that these objections have been overcome and that Governor Haskell will take his part in the advertising of Oklahoma as a fight centre.

METS' ELECTION STIRS THINGS

Who will be the next president of the Metropolitan Driving Club, Fred C. Gilsman, or W. J. McDonald? This is the live question that has thrown the members into excitement fits and numerous arguments. Sides on the problem have been drawn very closely between the two candidates, especially since the present incumbent of the office, C. H. Reisdorf, has announced his genuine retirement at the expiration of his term.

Both Garmon and McDonald have been very active in the affairs of the organization and, in consequence, each has strong friends working on his support. It is reported that Reisdorf favors Garmon for his successor and will use his influence in having him elected.

On the other hand McDonald says no scrap in the world is too much for good, Langford has not been knocked out, Jeff has never lost a fight yet. How are you, Stanley? I thought you had crooked.

FOR SPORT FANS

THE BETTING SHARPS OVER ABOUT New York have it figured out as an even money proposition that Cornell will score on Harvard this afternoon, and a 3 to 1 shot on the Crimson winning. They have a lot of wise ones in Gotham, but they tell me that the local sports who are making book on the games are offering a whole lot better odds, with the Crimson as the public choice. My hunch is that Cornell is a fair place bet.

DAVE DESHLER IS GOING AFTER the championship of the world and says he is like the baby reaching after the soup. He put it up cold turkey to Bat Nelson yesterday, but there is nothing doing with the Bitter until the expiration of the twenty-three weeks' theatrical engagement. Dave posted $1,000 for a match and Bat came back with a counter proposition which looks all to the good. Bat suggests an elimination contest between Freddie Welsh, Packy McFarland, Ad Wolgast, Lew Powell and Dave, this to be worked off by the time Bat gets through with his stage stunts, and then he will take on the best of the bunch in a fight for line championship. This was satisfactory to Dave and his manager, Alec McLean, and the $1,000 is posted with the sporting editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN as a challenge to any one of the youngsters named. But says Dave if any of them who refuses to meet Dave Deshler will be eliminated from his calculations, as it looks as if some good coin would be pulled off during the Winter, as all the boys are anxious for a chance at the champion.

DAVE DESHLER ISSUES DEFI TO BAT NELSON

Bat Nelson is a genius. He has solved the best way to find the proper opponent in the lightweight division to tackle him for his high honors.

It was Dave Deshler, our own top light weight, who got this decision on the Dane. The Cambridge lad, accompanied by his manager, Alec McLean, who is doing Dave's business now, confronted the champion in the BOSTON AMERICAN office and posted a forfeit of $1,000 to meet the Dane for the title.

As Nelson is booked up for twenty-three weeks on the stage, which carries him well along in the Spring, he says that he will be unable to fight, but proposes the elimination method to allow all the other light weights to fill themselves off in an effort to find the right one to meet him.

His suggestion is to have Packey Mc Farland and Cyclone Thompson fight, then then Ad Wolgast, the Billy Milwaukee slasher, bump with Ray Brouson of Cleveland, and Freddie Welsh and Summers will shortly decide the medal for their class in England. He says Deshler should fight Lew Powell, the sweet boy, who recently beat Johnny Frayne of New York.

As Nelson refuses to fight him, Deshler's forfeit will go for any of the other men who question the Battler's title and a visit to get a whack at him. First come first served.

The Harding A. A. of Revere and the Lincoln A. A. of Somerville will play at Revere to-day for the 135-140 pound championship of the State, which the Lincoln now claim. Both teams will go into the game with the confidence of success and will have a large crowd of followers.

As both teams have a clean slate this season a defeat for either side will put them out of the running. The Harding have defeated such teams as the Lowells Norwood, Newton, Brighton, Dorchester Heights and the Swampscotts. Arrangements have been made to handle a large crowd and the field will be roped off in order to give the players a clear field.

KLING 'IN BAD'; CANNOT PLAY FOR THREE YEARS

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—President Ban Johnson of the American League to-day in discussing the reported trade of Johnny Kling to Brooklyn by Chicago said:

"If Kling is swapped the club that gets him won't be able to use him for three years. I don't see, in fact, how he can be turned over to another club. He has failed the terms of his contract by failing to report to the club during an entire season. When later he played here with a semi-professional team.

"From the time he refused to report he had himself cited to punishment. The National Commission has discussed Kling's status informally, and the rule made last Spring will stand. He cannot play under the laws of the organization."

HOPE JIMMY WALSH WILL MAKE GOOD

There is great confidence amongst the supporters of Jimmy Walsh that the local favorite will be able to stop the victorious Tommy O'Toole when this pair meet at the Armory Club Tuesday night. The Philadelphian is reported to be in great shape, but he will have nothing on Walsh, who is a lad that is always in very fair condition. It will be a hard fall or soundness for the lads are anxious to win, knowing that a set back at this time will mean a relegation to the rear ranks.

MUST RACE TO END DISPUTE

BROCKTON, Nov. 6.—There are quite a few disputes that must be settled in Brockton Driving Club circles ere the season closes. "Pa Geese" McLatchlee's brown mare Pineora and James O'Leary's black gelding, Brockton Boy, must meet in their famous race or there will be a lot of long gas floating about the clubrooms and for fear the members be asphyxiated, the officials have decided to have the race pulled off.

"Shamus" O'Leary's stopper has got another important contest on with "Cyrus" Pettigrew's combination flyer, Robert F. The interest in this race, to be known as the "silk hat" race—the loser to purchase a silk hat and wear it thirty consecutive days—is growing greater and greater, as both horses have won idle sidents and are working finely.

Cyrus Pettigrew went saddling this week and Robert F. and reports success. He is now out with a challenge to either O'Leary or McLatchlee to a race under saddle, owners to ride.

OSBORN FIELD, Princeton, Nov. 6.—Decayed by a train wreck on the Pennsylvania railroad, the Dartmouth team arrived late on the field to-day for its great battle with Princeton. Thousands awaited with impatience the arrival of the Green warriors, who were hustled to the field in automobiles.

It was a critical day for the Dartmouth heroes who next Saturday will face the Crimson in the Harvard Stadium.

The weather conditions were ideal for a great gridiron battle. It was clear and just cool agough to fire the blood of the warriors into action. The Orange and Black eleven was in perfect condition and eager for the fray.

Crucial Test for Tigers.

Their plays were pretty well perfected and all Dartmouth recognized the crucial test to which the defenses of Old Nassau were to be subjected to-day. Upon the issue depended the chance the Princeton combination will have to humble "Old Eli" at New Haven next Saturday.

There were three changes in the Princeton team from the one which started against the Navy. Macgregor took the place of McCrohan, who was saved for the second half. In the practices of the past week Cunningham and Buckingham, who replaced Garrett at first halfback and Weeber at guard, respectively, gladly earned their positions, and both added to the kicking strength of the Tiger team.

The rest of the line-up remained the same, with Wendle, Sparks and Bard as the second set of backs.

Bets Quickly Covered.

The New Englanders came into town with a big pile of cash which was quickly covered by the Orange and Black enthusiasts. This was Princeton's big game on her own soil this year since the Yale game was at New Haven, and a great crowd assembled on Osborn Field. It was well known now that the visitors were great only in the color they wear and not in a fortunate lay by any means. Some of the men who helped to defeat Princeton last year were in the line-up to-day. They were confident of getting vengeance for last year's defeat to them.

EXETER, N. H., Nov. 6.—An enormous crowd of rooters turned out at the new Plimpton Field this afternoon for the annual Phillips-Exeter and Phillips-Andover football game, the most important preparatory school game of the year.

A special train that left Boston at 12:10 o'clock brought up a big crowd of enthusiasts. Throngs flocked from all directions. It was a perfect day for the game.

When the teams lined up at 2 o'clock it looked like an even choice between the two "prep" schools, and the contest became quite rare enthusiasm. Both elevens started off with unusual speed and spectacular plays were the order.

The likelihood of one of the most nearly even contests in years was partly responsible for the size of the excitement which prevailed when the game started.

Officials—Referee, Dr. Dudley Sargent, Harvard. Umpire, Walter Camp, Yale. Field Judge, Burleigh of Harvard. Time—Fifteen-minute halves.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 6.—In to-day's match against Brown, Yale rounded out her preliminary football games for the Princeton and Harvard struggles, which are now but one week off. Heat, weather and crisp, cool air brought out the biggest crowd of the season. Nearly 10,000 people turned out, a quarter of that number coming early and seeing the curtain raiser in the shape of the Yale-Princeton freshman match.

Yale's lineup was in doubt till the last minute, as it was not certain whether Daly, who has not quite returned to his best form, would be started at right halfback, or whether Franeis, who is certain to play most of the game there, would be played.

It was final tryout day for Savage and Vaughan, and both may get a regular place on the team as a result of their showing to-day. Brown has consistently given Yale a close contest each football year, having tied her three times, but never beaten her. Last year's 10 to 10 game was the speed of the season for the Bruins.

Clark Griffith thinks he has pennant winners in Washington for 1911. Well, he has a pitcher in mind, no-one game against seven of the best players, and two others to finish the season with satisfying ability.

In New York they are dreaming of having seven big league baseball teams in the outfield: Knetzer, Dooin, Devlin and Wagner, Bescher, Magee and Kling and Schlei behind the bat. Another infield would be a good pitching staff.

Up in Detroit they are wondering if there isn't a chance for the Tigers to get Pat Powers to manage the team. Jennings started Detroit last year as coach of the Syracuse University eleven, but refused to consider baseball.

JERRY WITH HIS K. O. WILL BOX MORRIS

There is a good backing boxing specialty added to the National A. C.'s card of boxing next Monday night as Jerry Gaines the Middle champ clashes with Andy Morris the East Boston heavyweight.

Jerry is popular on account of his knock out wallop which he still carries and he only needs to land his kick once to remove anything in the ring.

Another six round bout has been arranged between Jimmy Quinlan a promising light weight from Danvers who has won three contests by the knockout route lately at Lynn, will face Harry Kelly of Cambridge. Harry is a brother of the clever Jack Kelly. In try-outs recently, Harry has earned the favorable opinion of critics. Other bouts, with Kid Munroe-Brennan certain raiser, and the feature bout between Kyle Whitney and Billy Gordon make up a splendid card for Monday night's entertainment.

FILLY WITH GREAT SPEED.

The two-year-old filly Normonda that got a record of 2:14¾ at Saltsea, Cal., made the railbirds at Phenomenal, Cal., give the other day by stopping a half in :49¾ for Charley Dellgder, and on the strength of this has undisputed claim to being the she will beat Maggie Winder's 2:06¼ next season, according accidents.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

BOXING NOTES BRIEFLY TOLD

Oh yes! Parker also has a match on with Kid Henry. They will meet at Troy on November 15.

* * *

Kid Griffo has been heard from. This young man is playing Philadelphia with Joe Thomas and Sammy Smith. That's all.

* * *

They say that Jimmy Kelly is going to sign up seven fighters and take them on a barnstorming tour of the country.

* * *

Billy Newman's Long Acre Club has been redecorated and a grand opening is planned. Everything is settled but the date.

* * *

Jim Buckley sent a bunch of huskies up to the Sharkey Club to shovel out the place that terminated there. Dominick Buckey is in charge.

* * *

Billy Gibson is still paying rent for the Fairmount Club's home and hoping for the best. Bill has a new bid for the Jeffries-Johnson bout.

* * *

The members of the Northwestern A. A. are going to try to get a card to-night. Chief Bender will be in the main go.

* * *

Leach Cross announced through his brother, Sam, that he is through fighting forever.

* * *

Only once more will Leach agree to enter the ring. If Harry Stone will fight him in private, for fun, he's on.

* * *

Stone said some mean things about Cross, and Leach wants to make him eat his words.

* * *

The old sign, "Louis Wallach, Dentist," is being rubbed up and will soon be swung to the breezes.

* * *

Andy Parker has a press agent. This is Leo P. Flynn. Mr. Flynn sends out a letter after every fight Parker wins, telling all about it. The latest says that Parker is to buy Young Donohue at the Queen City A. C. on November 8.

* * *

After that fight Parker wants to meet Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy, Packey McFarland or Johnny Thompson. He is not ready for Nelson yet.

* * *

Charley Harvey has the big Irishman, Con O'Kelley, in hog, and says if he doesn't make good as a wrestler he will insert in against Jeffries. O'Kelly looks big enough to take Jeffries and Johnson on together and knock their heads together. Still Jeffries has met other big fellows.

* * *

Con O'Kelley, to prove that he is Irish, carries a pea green handkerchief.

* * *

If the articles for the fight had read "twenty or more rounds" there would have been a petition for it, and the fighters would have drawn down a good purse.

* * *

Jim Corbett, the distinguished Westerner who is visiting New York, is going to the last few days of training before Gotch and Hackenschmidt struggle on the Athens fistic carnival so that he can get his bad a chance to get it.

* * *

Frankie Neil the Frisco featherweight, is back East and Frankie looks a lot short and weighs around 128 at present. Neil dropped in just too late to keep Jack Britton from getting on Johnny Payne, for when he left the coast Payne was far from better in all condition for a fight.

NAVY WANTS GAME NOV. 27

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 27.—It is possible that the Naval Academy will schedule a game to be played at Annapolis on November 27 with the biggest open date it can secure for that date to take the place of the cancelled West Point game. There was talk of trying to get Pennsylvania will play two days after the cornell game. It is certain that the Navy would welcome a game with Yale, Harvard or Princeton on that date at Annapolis.

MIKE MALONE GETS DRAW WITH PIERCE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Young Pierce and Mike Malone went at a fast clip in the six-round go at the Nonpareil Athletic Club with neither boy the advantage at the end. Malone had a big margin in the opening round, but Pierce came back strong in the next with a right to the stomach that had Mike groggy. Both boys did some fancy fought all the harder. The final round was a corker, Pierce getting a right that clob for some time, while the others were also full of action.

WANTS MATCH RACE.

Al Cummings is endeavoring to arrange a match race between the Ambling Lily and Miss Logan, Nonpareil Athletic Club, with neither boy the advantage at the end. Malone had a big margin in the opening round, but Pierce came back strong in the next with a right to the stomach that had Mike groggy. Both boys did some fancy fought all the harder. The final round was a corker, Pierce getting a right that clob for some time, while the others were also full of action.

GOLF GOSSIP CLUB NOTES

Local features at most of the Greater Boston golf clubs will attract their own members this week-end, in addition to her members' events will have the advantage of tournament over their course both in the morning and afternoon.

Herbert Jacques, the son of the president of the United States Golf Association, was very much missed by the cross country men with the 1911 A. A. U. team at Indianapolis last fall but will keep him from the track for the rest of the season.

A great deal of credit is due Joe McNamara of the Country Club for the way he looks after the caddies under his charge. Joe has a corps of youngsters that is quite a race track now days to meet in a man who can handle a couple of lads sort that demands managing, patience, courtesy and ability. Joe has just the same day in and day out, rain and wind, and the boys respect him for it. He has many strong friends at the Clyde Park course.

Mrs. E. F. Abbott of Allston was a very pretty prize with her card of 104 gross and 84 net for the nine holes played by the women members of this club, Mrs. Abbott's net score is a good one considering the fact that part of the round was played in a drenching rain.

Miss Mary R. Adams, one of the best women golfers that this State ever had is now at the Country Club for the week. She is known to all the women golfers in the country as any prominence and it is safe to say that she could have been a most popular champion if she could have entered the contest that was recently awarded Miss Adams always just missed out.

At Commonwealth recently a rather interesting feature of the week-end golf was played a four-ball match was the fact that only one of the four was on the course going to the sixth hole. One had hooked and the ball went into another hole and he got ten a little pull and was headed for the eighth, one had gone on to the green and was over on the seventh fairgreen. The one who was going to Bonne was engulfed five minutes later when all the players were standing their putts on the green and the sweet part of it was they halved the hole in four, and each equaled the bogey of 5 on the hole.

COFFROTH MAY HOLD FIGHT CARNIVAL ON COAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Not a word as yet from Jim Coffroth, big Magnate of the fight promoters, in regard to his offer for the Johnson-Jeffries championship battle. Coffroth insists, as he did the day he arrived from California, that he hasn't given up the thing a thought and won't until he has cleared up the business of the Ketchel and Johnson moving pictures. Coffroth said yesterday:

"I have been besieged by friends, scribes, managers and fighters alike to make my intentions known at this matter. It has been proposed to me that I make a three day fight carnival of the affair if I land the big contest. It has been suggested that I have a half and idea, that in the event of my landing the greatest fight in history that I do so the New Orleans promoter that I will be willing to stage a three-day session and decide then and there the championship of the world. I have no good material to work with in the Jeffries-Johnson affair, as I have in such men as the Attell-Ben Driscoll, Harlem Tommy Packey McFarland, Tom Kilbane affair and then the big Jeff and Jack contest, but two to fill out suggestion, and nothing may come of it. The chances are

BIG SCHOOL BATTLE TO-DAY

The big school games of the day are the Somerville-Malden and Newton-Waltham. The Somerville contest is most important, for the reason that the Red and White have been going strong all season and after its poor work last Saturday its supporters are not any too confident of victory. Somerville has been consistent in games.

The position of Captain Shute for insinuation will have its full strength and with the extra training that the team has had Malden team is another of the Interscholastic League that has been going strong and is most exciting.

Newton Hills is confident of taking Waltham's scalp, just on the basis that Waltham has come up to the form that Newton accomplished. Newton are a fast, heavy team, with a good line and fine backfield. Waltham has been considered while the authorities have been considering the matter. Waltham has an impossible for them to hold a heavy, well-trained team as Newton will be for the local boys to hold one in Madison Square Garden.

By the way, I must not join Driscoll and Jack Britton in the fight. Both of the featherweight championship. I have closed with Attell and with Herrera, if it is Herrera I'll be on hand to see my fight time."

The Vocation and Dream of Many Women

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"WHEN I'm a man," said Colin, gazing through his glasses like a solemn little owl, "I'm going to be a farmer and a Democrat."

"I'm going to be a mining engineer," announced John, a thoughtful, earnest boy of twelve.

Their proud aunt, listened delightedly to these words of wisdom from my wonderful nephews.

"And what will you be when you are grown up, Margaret?" I said, turning to their small sister, who sat rocking to and fro crooning a soft little tuneless lullaby to the doll cradled in her arms.

"A mother," she said briefly, and went on with her lullaby.

"Pooh!" said Colin scornfully, "that doesn't mean anything. Anybody can be a mother."

"You can't," was the calm answer, and the argument was closed.

The Greatest Vocation

The dear baby had simply voiced the instinctive idea in every woman-child's mind from her infancy onward.

Every woman is born to be a mother, though to some that crowning glory of a woman's life is denied.

But every woman should live as though that were to be her vocation.

Every girl should keep her heart pure and clean—and her life blameless and spotless.

There are many careers open to women nowadays, but not one that can compare to that which began when the morning stars first sang aloud—motherhood.

Schumann-Heink, the famous contralto, has two careers—her wonderful success on the stage and her motherhood.

Which do you suppose she cherishes most—her golden voice or her happy, healthy group of boys and girls?

Deep down in every woman's heart is the mother love and instinct. Unconsciously, all through her childhood and girlhood she is working, planning for her nest.

When, as a little girl, she "plays house," the corner of the nursery is a real house, the toy dishes and make-believe meals are all very real to the little mother in embryo.

It is this homing instinct in women that has brought the world to its present civilization.

Women, the Builders

Women are like beavers, building, building, always building the foundation of the future home and happiness. If Margaret were a little older she probably would not so calmly announce her future plans, but she thought would be dormant in her heart nevertheless.

To be a mother and a good one is the most splendid, glorious future that any girl can aspire to.

Your heart may be filled with day dreams of great success as a singer, actress or along some other line. We all feel that we have great possibilities in us if we could get the chance to develop them. Isn't that so, little sisters?

But no matter what your public career may be don't for one moment imagine that it will fill your life. You are a woman and no woman is satisfied without love.

To marry the man you love with all your heart and soul and to be a good wife and the mother of his children, that is happiness worth dreaming about.

Never say you don't intend to marry the honest man who loves you. Of course, I mean to marry, if the right man asks me."

And when he does ask you don't let your chance of happiness slip by; hold it and treasure it and make the most of it.

Every woman's vocation and her godgiven right is a home and children.

IN CASE OF FIRE.

THEY were country people pure and simple, but they had read the home papers and thought they were educated up to all the improvements of the day.

When they visited Washington, D. C., they went through the Navy Department and saw the models of some of the new battleships.

Pointing to a companion ladder hanging over the side of one of the ships, she asked her better half what it was.

"Oh, he replied, "that's the fire escape."

"Off to the Wars" As It Was and Will Be By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal-Examiner

There was color and beauty and romance in the gallant knight's farewell. The maid of the future will bid her soldier farewell ere he mounts to the skies

"A MAID and a soldier!" Maids have bidden men good-bye and sent them "off to the wars," as the widow of "Mac" said when she wouldn't loan the jars that "Mac" gave her before he went to "the wars and everything!"

They've watched them go and not ever come back before Joshua's hordes tried to talk with the sun.

He had gone by horse and by boat, and on foot, by Norse ship and Roman galley, and by torpedo and submarine, by canoe and warship and broncho and automobile.

The best of all these pics is when he left a damsel with long hair casseled on the end, to claim armor and accoutrements, in gold and brass silver, with a cross of gold splashed above his forehead, his hair in a Dutch-cut and his host a rolling host, banners curling and unfolding, amid the ceaseless beating of stepping horses' hoofs and a field of glittering spears.

There was color, and beauty and the romance! Something to lash your blood up round your heart.

And Mitord of the Dutch-cut, when he tore himself away with a groan from his fingers of a Lady a-tying the ribbon of her colors into the rings below his colt, by way of going was on a horse, a great pliant beast trapped up to match the man who bestrode him—in beaten silver and red, with a ribbon in his forelock to keep company with the one in his mane. A soft-eyed piece of mighty, live flesh under a man. A live thing that felt his ardor and battle-ecstacy, and went to it or die even as he did, and strove as valiantly in the doing of it.

That was the then that lies far behind. Curve your hand over your eyes, Betty-person, and look to the Then that lies ahead.

There's my soldier in leather, with a Maxim silencer on his rifle and smokeless powder in it, shored and sabred for close-quarter scrapping, and in his little fist his bag of fire-crackers to drop down in the burg of his enemies.

Hearts are always the same, glory be! A man and his maid never change.

There'll be the same sighs and kisses and a groan at the parting and soft hands to leave their feel on his neck for many days, and perhaps a flower in his cap and a kiss tucked into his pocket for when he's lonely and wishes for one.

And his going'll be on wings. And his army is drifting by overhead in the blue of the infinite sky against the sun, with only the far away rustle of perfect machinery and the who of the wind through their ropes and planes; in giant flock of birds driving to battle over the horizon.

Maids have watched from the walls of the city and fluttered their hands and dropped their tears for the outgoing army. They'll still watch from the battlements of cities and drop their tears, but then they'll look up instead of down.

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

By Special Order.

Copyright, 1909, by D. Appleton & Co.

It was after 6 when Alice left the circular railway at the Montrouge station.

She was in a remote and unfamiliar part of Paris, the region of the catacombs and the Gobelin tapestry works, and, although M. Paul had given her precise instructions, she wandered about for half an hour among streets of hospitals and convents until at last she came to an open place where she recognized Bartholdi's famous Belfort lion.

Then she knew her way, and, hurrying along the Boulevard Arago, she came presently to the gloomy mass of the Sante prison, which, with its diverging wings and corberies, spreads out like a great gray spider in the triangular space between the Rue Hautdodly, the Rue de la Sante and the Boulevard Arago.

A kind-faced policeman pointed out a massive stone archway where she must enter, and passing here, beside a stolid soldier in his sentry box, she came presently to a black iron door, in front of which were waiting two yellow and black prison vans, windowless. In this prison door were four glass-covered inspection holes, and through these Alice saw a guard within, who, as she lifted the black iron knocker, drew forth a long brass key and turned the bolt.

The door swung back, and with a shiver of repulsion, the girl stepped inside. This was the prison, there was standing about were the jailers and—what did that matter so long as she got to him—to dear Henri Lloyd. There was nothing she would not face or endure for his sake.

The Name of Coquenil

No sooner had the guard heard that she came with a note from M. Paul Coquenil that was a name to conjure with) than he showed her politely to a small waiting room, assuring her that the note would be given at once to the director of the prison. And a few moments later another door opened and a tall, gaunt, jaw-bowed man of heavy build bowed to her with a crooked, sinister smile and motioned her into his private office. It was M. Dedet, the chief jailer, and he looked the part.

"Always at the service of Paul Coquenil," he began. "What can I do for you, mademoiselle?"

Then, summoning her courage, and trying her best to make a good impression, Alice told him her errand. She wanted to speak with the American, M. Kittridge, who had been sent here the night before. She wanted to speak with his alone.

Dedet's face snapped his teeth and narrowed his brows in a hard stare. "Did Paul Coquenil send you here for that?" he questioned.

"Yes, sir," answered the girl and her heart began to sink. "You see, it's a very special case, indeed."

"Special case," laughed the other harshly. "I should say so. It is a case of murder."

"But he is innocent, perfectly innocent," pleaded Alice.

"Of course, but if I let every murderer who says he's innocent see his sweet lawyer—well, this would be a fine prison. No, no, little one," he went on, with offensive familiarity, "I am sorry to disappoint you and I hate to refuse M. Paul, but it can't be done. This man is expected, that means that he must not see any one except his lawyer. You know they assign a lawyer to a prisoner who has no money to employ one."

"But he has money, at least, I have some for him. Please let me see him, for a few minutes." Her eyes filled with tears and she reached out her hands appealingly. "If you only knew the circumstances, if I could only make you understand."

"Haven't time to listen," he said impatiently; "there's no use whining. I can't do it, and that's the end of it. If you talk with this man and if the thing were known I might lose my position." He rose abruptly as if to dismiss her.

Alice started to her feet. "I—I beg your pardon," she said weakly and, staggering, she tried to reach the door. Her distress was so evident that even this calloused man felt a thrill of pity and stepped forward to assist her. And as he passed the table his eye fell on the blotting paper.

"Why, what is this?" he exclaimed, eyeing her sharply.

"Oh, excuse me, sir," begged Alice, "I have spoiled your nice blotter, I am so sorry."

"Never mind the blotter, but"—— he bent closer over the scrawled words, and then with a troubled look: "Did you write this?"

"Why—er—why—yes, sir, I'm afraid I did," she stammered.

"Don't you know you did?" he demanded, amazed.

"I—I wasn't thinking," she pleaded in fright.

He stared at her for a moment, then he went to his desk, picked up a printed form, filled it out quickly, and handed it to her.

"There," he said, and his voice was almost gentle, "I guess I didn't quite understand about this thing."

Alice looked at the paper blankly. "But —what is it?" she asked.

The jailer closed one eye very slowly with a wise nod. "It's what you asked for, a permit to see this American prisoner, by special order."

Percy Has One Cause to Be Very Thankful

By HANK.

"CHEE!" exclaimed the Show Girl while looking over the bill of fare, "they've got turkey on here already with Thanksgiving away off."

"Oh, what does it matter how far off it is?" replied Percy, who was peevish that evening. "The further off the better."

"Chee!" uttered the Show Girl in surprise, "you've got a grouch for fair tonight. What's bitin' you?"

"Aw, it's just this," said Percy, "here's Thanksgiving Day. You are supposed to be thankful for what? Because Christmas is coming?

"That is an event to look forward to with a great longing, I don't think. It means going broke buying presents and getting things people thank you for, while at the same time they are roasting you behind your back for not gettin' something else. Oh, pfffe, three times without stopping."

Percy's Monumental Grouch

"There, there," said the Show Girl, soothingly, "does its little tooth hurt it, or it has got the croup? You give me a pain with your growling all the time."

"Well, maybe you can tell me some reason why I should be happy or thankful," suggested Percy, with due sarcasm.

"I can," said the Show Girl, confidently, "for instance, you ought to be glad you are alive."

"Glad I'm alive," echoed Percy, "why, you just finished callin' me a dead one, or words to that effect."

"Well, ain't you thankful you've got a job?" asked the Show Girl.

"No," said Percy, "why should I have a job?"

"I don't know," answered the Show Girl.

"Oh, I don't mean what you mean," said Percy, "I mean why should I have to work? Why should I be forced to labor my life out, while men with half the brains I possess have millions, and"——

"Kill it, kill it before it bites you," interrupted the Show Girl, "you're getting dippy in the Singer tower."

"Now I'll give it to you good. You should be thankful that you've got a place to sleep in; thankful that you've got a good digestion what can eat these here butter cakes every night without winkling; thankful that you've got two cents to pay for them, and maybe five more to pay for mine; thankful that you haven't so much money you wouldn't know what to do with it; thankful that the shows a hit, and that you've got a job with it; thankful that"——

Winning Forgiveness

"Hey, hey!" shouted Percy, "quit it, for the love of pity. I give in. Chee! But you can get started."

"Well, you deserve all you got," snapped the Show Girl. "Any guy that says he ain't got nothing to be thankful for must be suffering from spinal meningitis or something."

"Oh, him! I have got one thing to be thankful for," said Percy, who could see signs of tears in the victims eyes, "I've got one thing, and that makes up for all the rest."

"Well, what is it?" asked the Show Girl suspiciously. "Have you got an invitation to a free dinner that makes you so thankful?"

"No" said Percy; "I'm thankful for being so lucky as to have the prettiest girl in the show sitting across the table from me. And it's a great big thank."

"Sometimes," murmured the Show Girl after a moment's silence, "you do say something sometimes. You're forgiven."

HIS EARS DECEIVED HIM.

Burglar—Nar, then, hand me over that gold watch from under yer pillier.

Householder (nervous but resourceful)—R-but I haven't a w-watch under my pillow.

Burglar—Garn! I can hear it.

Householder—N-no; what you hear is the b-bed ticking.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and It Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-five years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of these. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased mucous membranes and stops the foul discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not get into the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, simply send your address to Dr. J. W. # Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NEED NOT HESITATE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a man thirty-seven years of age, a mechanic, doing well. I was introduced to a young lady by a friend who works in the shop with her. I asked her to go out with me, but instead she invited me to her house one evening, where I went and have paid several visits since. Now, this young lady and her sister, who is the younger older, were brought up by two older brothers, their parents having died when they were young, and the brothers are very careful about their sisters' company, so I can understand the house invitation. Now, the people are very nice, plain American working people with good sense and small fortune, and we very well on all occasions. I believe this young lady's sister is about twenty-three, and seems to be of the most pleasant disposition of the two. I would like to show a preference and let her know it without offending either party, as they are both present on my calls.

ANXIOUS INQUIRER.

I DO not think you need hesitate to show your preference, as you were not really attentive to the first sister, but merely friendly. They seem like very nice people, and I am sure they will quite understand the situation. Your letter has a manly, sensible tone, and I wish you all success in your suit.

TALK WITH HER MOTHER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, eighteen years of age and am in love with a young girl of seventeen. For about ten months we have been going out occasionally here and there, and so I have become greatly attached to her. While out with her, I have tried to give her the best of good times and make things pleasant for her.

During this Summer she went away for a month. There she met some young men, one of whom took quite a fancy to her. When she came home she did not act the same to me. Her mother seems to keep her away from me, the reason for which is unknown to me. She manages to take her out whenever I want to see her. What I want to do is to have a personal talk with her and get at the bottom of it all. I am unable to do this, as her mother always stands in the way. We, of course, are too young to think of anything serious yet, but I have set-out thoughts of the future. All I want to do is to regain that friendship which so suddenly disappeared.

PERPLEXED.

THE best thing to do is have a talk with the mother. Tell her that all you want is an explanation. Tell her that you will not try to see the girl without her consent; that you thought it more honorable to go straight to her. If she is at all fair-minded she will tell you what her objections are and give you a chance to overcome them.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

WHAT'S THE USE OF BEING BALD

Here's a Specialist Who Says It Is Unnecessary, and Proves It.

The intense interest in the wonderful work that is being accomplished in Baltimore and other cities by William Chas. Keene, president of the Lorrimer Institute, continues unabated. Many cases of baldness and faded hair of years' standing have been remedied by the remarkable preparation being distributed from Mr. Keene's laboratory, and its fame is spreading far and wide, and thousands of persons are using this remarkable hair food with gratifying results.

What makes this treatment more popular is the fact that free trial outfits are sent by mail prepaid. Those who wish to try it are strongly advised to write to Mr. Keene, at the Lorrimer Institute, Branch 420, Baltimore, Md. They will receive the full trial outfit free of charge and much useful information about the hair, which will put them on the road to a rapid and certain improvement.

NO NEED TO BE THIN

Easy to Put on Good Solid Flesh —50c Package Free.

"Gee! Look at that pair of skinny scarecrows! Why don't they try Sargol!"

There is no longer need to stay thin, scrawny and poorly nourished, for at last a treatment has been perfected that actually increases the weight of those who use it. The discovery is called Sargol, and is the greatest possible boon to the thin, emaciated, unattractive man or woman.

Those who start to gain a pound a day for using Sargol will not need to follow disagreeable diet rules or undergo strenuous exercises—simply a little sugar-coated tablet that soon fills out the figure with shapely curves.

These little Sargol tablets give a gain in weight in a perfectly natural way by increasing the assimilative powers of the digestive organs so that the food you eat is changed into good, solid flesh instead of merely passing through the system without making fat or tissue.

Scientists have long sought this flesh-making element, but with no avail until the fortunate combination of Sargol solved the problem. To prove that Sargol will give a gain of from ten to thirty pounds the Sargol Company, 138-L, Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., will send a 50c. package free on receipt of 10c. in stamps or silver to pay distribution expenses. Write to-day and see how easy it is to put flesh on your bones.

Don't think for a moment that you have solved your coffee question by reading these advertisements.

You have yet to confide to your grocer: "Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand."

In 1 and 2 pound cans. 35 cents a pound. Never in bulk.

The luncheon given by Director Henry Russell of the Boston Opera Company and by Mrs. Russell at the Lenox yesterday was peculiarly distinguished as it also marked the social inauguration of permanent grand opera for Boston. There has never before in this city, the Athens of America, just such an opportunity for combination of the musical and social atmospheres.

The luncheon was served in one of the guestrooms of the Lenox Hotel, the table, arranged in form of a double "T," was profusely decorated with vases of roses along the covers.

The table was arranged in order that personal friends of Director Russell might meet the principal soloists of the Boston Opera Company. # NORTH DAKOTA ON NEW TEST

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 6.—The battleship North Dakota, on which sixteen men were injured by the blowing out of a boiler pipe, went out to-day for another speed and endurance test.

The four injured men who were left on the Naval Hospital list are better today and will recover. They are keenly interested in what the big ship does. "Don't mind us," one of them said to a visitor to-day. "Just the ship go out and beat 'em all right."

The new dreadnought is the latest of the world's records for ships of her class, although she has not yet been turned over to the government.

ORANGE JUDGE LAYS DOWN WORKING LAW

ORANGE, Nov. 6.—"The law cannot compel a man to work for another, but a man must do as he is ordered without any back talk if he is working for some one," said Judge E. S. Hall when Fred Hale was arraigned before him in the District Court, charged with insulting Lon J. Olsen.

Both men are employed by the Ahlborn Electric Light Company in the building of a dam at Rockdale. Despite this a re-pentant Hale and Olsen shook hands.

The trouble started when Olsen gave Hale small instructions about doing a short time later Hale, who is a large, powerful fellow, grabbed Olsen by the arm on the ground. Judge Hall placed the case on file.

SOCIETY GIRL BOSTON MAN'S BRIDE TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Think of it. Marie de Acosta, whose marriage to Andrew Robeson Sargent, son of Professor and Mrs. Charles Sargent of "Holm Lea," Brookline, took place this afternoon, has received 200 wedding presents—a pretty good evidence of her popularity.

They came from her relatives and friends here and Mr. Sargent's family in Boston.

A number of jewels, other gauges and things too numerous to mention.

Her mother has given her a trousseau and some wonderful linens; Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, sister of Mrs. Sargent, sent her cut glass; Mrs. Owen Root, another sister, has presented her with all the exquisite lingerie for her own room, embroidered cushions and bedspreads and other dainties.

Mr. Sargent's gift was a chain of 41a pearls, with diamond pendant; earrings and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay sent a most beautiful Cottier clock. Indeed, Miss de Acosta has practically furnished the jewels her future home which Mr. Sargent is building in Brookline, Mass.

It will be a most charming house, for it will embody many of the rich relics and while she has never studied architecture, she has spent so much time between times across the ocean that she has stored up in her memory many desirable ideas which she will be introduced in her new residence.

The wedding was at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ricardo de Costa, No. 1057 Madison avenue, and the ceremony was performed by Dr. Grieg, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, in the presence of relatives and intimate friends. Invitations were limited, but the reception afterward was more general.

Mr. Sargent and his bride will promptly go abroad for a few weeks. He is one of the foremost landscape gardeners in this country.

The bride was attended by her two interesting younger sisters, Misses Angela and Mercedes de Acosta. Charles S. Sargent, Jr., attended his brother as best man.

EXPULSION IS NEXT STEP IN STETSON CASE

Excommunication from the Christian Science Church still faces Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, teacher and leader of the First Church in New York. Mrs. Stetson has already been taken "admonished" by the directors of the Mother Church in this city.

In an official statement to-day, Alfred Farlow of this city makes it plain that Mrs. Stetson's stay in the church depends upon her future behavior. The statement by Mr. Farlow is as follows:

"Mrs. Stetson has been admonished according to a by-law of the Mother Church, and whatever is done by way of future discipline, or cessation of discipline, depends upon her future conduct.

"Those who are in a position to know declare that Mrs. Stetson has been given her last chance; that in addition of her alleged previous offences will lead to her excommunication.

"They further say that Mrs. Stetson is personally on probation, and if she violates again any of the orders of the Mother Church she will be dropped from the other hand, if her future conduct is exemplary, Mr. Farlow's statement makes it clear that there will be a cessation of discipline in her case.

"Leaders in the anti-Stetson faction of the church prophesied yesterday that Mrs. Stetson would be excommunicated as a result of the church meeting Thursday, in which she was exonerated of all the serious charges made by the board of directors of the Mother Church. The unanimity was made when it was learned for the first time that Mrs. Stetson had been admonished twice, and that the next step would be excommunication.

It was learned to-day that Mrs. Stetson was disconsolate for the greater part of Monday, November 1, the same day that Mrs. Eddy sent a statement to the papers reasserting her fealty to Mrs. Eddy and the church.

SHOE FEATURE AT 1915 FAIR

One of the most instructive and interesting exhibits at the Boston 1915 Exposition in the city of Missouria of Fine Arts building is that of the New England Shoe and Leather Association. It is unique in form, the exhibit, and consists of an attractive announcement in bright red letters on white background covering a space 7 by 11 feet.

It tells that this city is the manufacturing, selling and exporting centre of the greatest leather and footwear manufacturing district in existence. It tells that $160,000,000 is invested in the shoe business of New England and that during the past year nearly $300,000,000 are manufactured annually. ## PLEADS FOR CHILD AT THE 1915 SHOW

Cruelties to Massachusetts children were told of at the lecture, "The Cry of the Children," was given at the 1915 Exposition by R. S. Hubbard, secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Pictures were shown of the different cases, some pitiful, showing misery at its worst.

Among the most gruesome of the pictures was a group of weapons including clubs, knives, hatchets, straps, whips, etc., used in beating children, which Mr. Hubbard said was used very frequently, and as out of 6000 cases in the past year only thirteen were found where children had been beaten.

The 1915 movement can aid our society greatly by making public the conditions existing in our South and North Ends," he said.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The turning from the industrials to the rails is a natural move in view of the fall and-ong character of the market.

For the next few days purchases should be made with great conservatism.

$ $ $

Speculative feeling, however, is more bullish on industrials and coppers than rails.

$ $ $

As nearly all "high-priced" rails are now bonding now since they have become heavy, and a new set of stocks must become the leaders of the next bull movement.

$ $ $

In a great number of the country's industries, manufacturing plants are working full time. Take the case of many industrial corporations, as if not wishing to claim it for themselves, say that their mills are running 55 per cent, or 97 per cent, of their full limit. But this is a case where could be expected under the most favorable circumstances. The corporation with a number of mills can have every part of all of them running all the time.

$ $ $

Strength and activity in industrial stocks recently is a relex of business conditions now existing.

$ $ $

The activity at the mills will mean increased earnings for the railroads, and needs, later, and then the railroad stocks will come in for renewed attention. The bullishness now is in the stocks of industrials and for this reason it was entirely natural that Monday's strength should have been first to feel a new impulse.

$ $ $

It is a fortunate circumstance, in view of conditions in money, that the industrial stocks are, as a class, lower in price than the railroad issues, and that the buying movement in them can, therefore, be conducted without tying up any large amount of funds.

$ $ $

From abroad came reports of a possible increase in the bank rate at London and Berlin next week. These rumors received some credence because the House of Commons has just passed the budget under such circumstances that the Lords will certainly reject it. This means that the Bank of England will have to finance the Government until a general election can be held, and then the fight will begin all over. This foreign disturbance will ultimately help American stocks by driving speculative Wall Street to buying more out of England to the United States.

$ $ $

Brokers who have borrowed large sums of money in London and that now, when these loans are coming due, the foreign bankers urge them to renew the obligations rather than pay them off. This does not fit in with the same talk indulged in by Wall Street. However, the rate for speculating Wall Street by way of London.

$ $ $

Some specialties gave good accounts of themselves, particularly American Hide and Leather preferred. Rubber and other rubber issues, too, were conspicuous. Coppers showed sympathetic weakness because of the heavy volume of orders put out by the leading individuals. Many railroads are preparing to issue new securities to buy equipment. There is already a shortage of cars in many sections of the country, and the shortage will grow worse by as soon as the steel movement becomes free out of Pittsburg.

$ $ $

Interests that are working for the proper commutation report some progress, but that can be said in regard to the matter at this time is that there is no longer any doubt that the Massachusetts delegation is being used in favor of an adjustment of differences. This is done because of the Roman interest in American Smelting. which has been very large since the panic of 1907.

GETS 30 YEARS' SENTENCE.

A LITTLE COLD.

He caught a little cold—
That was all.
So the neighbors sadly said
As they gathered round his bed
When they learned that he was dead:
He caught a little cold—
That was all.

—Puck.

You can break up a cold in twenty-four hours by taking one dose each night that is curable with a mixture of two ounces of Glycerine, a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. Take a teaspoonful every four hours. For throat and bronchial trouble and to soothe and heal irritations of the mucous surface this formula is highly recommended by the Leach Chemical Co., of Cincinnati, who prepare the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure for dispensing through druggists.

REACTION IN COPPER LIST

STATE STREET, Nov. 6—Closing: A slight selling movement developed in the market this forenoon and prices showed general but slight reactions. Trading fell off during the short session, and the market became dull with the weakness.

Prices for copper shares have shown a general hardening tendency practically the entire week and a reaction was overdue. This is the way the traders figured it out and this explains why, although prices showed a slight improvement at the opening.

A brisk European demand is reported for Calumet & Hecla copper, and a price of 12½ cents is reported by the company. During the forenoon Greene-Cananea sagged to 11½ on slight offerings, and Butte Coalition to 25⅞. Amalgamated Copper showed some selling weakness, but arbitrage houses. North Butte also weakened to 56, but they claim they are running at the rate of 3,000,000 pounds monthly. Outside of coppers Steel common ran off 1 to 90⅝. Reheard copper and pfds. for 7. First National touched 7, but was bought back at the close. Slight changes occurred in other stocks.

One Plain Duty of Congress

Mr. Taft Ought to See That It Is Attended to—The Restoration of the Army Canteen

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal-Examiner

Our readers know that in a fit of cowardice the Congress of the United States, WHICH HAS ITS OWN CANTEEN and drinks what it wants to drink, abolished the army canteen.

This was done to oblige well-meaning, kind-hearted prohibitionists, women especially, who know as little about the management of an army and the life of a soldier—AND, IN FACT, ABOUT THE ENTIRE DRINK QUESTION—as a man living on the edge of one of the canals in Mars.

When the canteen was in existence the soldiers could get harmless drinks—beer, etc.—IN MODERATION, right in their own quarters. There was no drunkenness, for the canteen was under the control of officers. The men were satisfied with the comradeship of their own canteen. Nobody made any profit out of it. If a canteen showed a profit, that was spent in procuring delicacies for the men, to be added to their regular army ration.

Hypocrisy destroyed the canteen, and what happened?

Around every fort, around every army post, there were quickly established the most disreputable whiskey dives.

DRUNKENNESS AND DESERTION HAVE INCREASED A HUNDRED PER CENT. IN THE ARMY SINCE THE CANTEEN WAS ABOLISHED. The men have been not only made dissatisfied, but have been driven into drunkenness.

This hypocritical, unjust and stupid legislation was made to apply even to the old soldiers' homes. And now the old veterans of a war, too old to change their habits entirely, and perfectly entitled to a reasonable stimulant if they want it, are obliged to hobble off to some distant whiskey dive INTO WHICH THEY WOULD NEVER PUT A FOOT IF THE GOVERNMENT WOULD TREAT THEM HALF-WAY DECENTLY.

The canteen means sobriety and contentment in the army. What an outrage that hypocritical lawmakers, eager to curry favor with a more or less imaginary organized vote, should DELIBERATELY AND KNOWINGLY DEPRIVE THE SOLDIERS OF THEIR RIGHT, drive them into drunkenness and get them into trouble by abolishing the canteen!

This canteen matter is not merely a matter of opinion. Every army officer testifies to the harm that has been done by canteen abolition.

---

General Frederick D. Grant himself may be fairly described as a rabid prohibitionist. He marched in full uniform in a prohibition procession in Chicago.

His wisdom in doing this may be questioned, but certainly he acted within his right. There are undoubtedly sad memories in the mind of General Grant, as there are in the minds of many others in this world, that make drink hateful in every form.

But General Grant himself, prohibitionist and total abstainer though he be, demands the restoration of the army canteen, because he sees that the canteen works, relatively speaking at least, for sobriety, and that the abolition of the canteen works for drunkenness and desertion in the army.

General Grant declares that if he had his way he would have no soldier drinking intoxicants at all, but, SINCE THEY WILL DRINK—and he and every other sensible man knows that a body of men, as a whole, will continue to drink for centuries in the future, as they have for tens of centuries in the past—he demands the canteen, which he calls "a protective circle into which no vice or degradation can enter."

---

It is stated that the American army, since the abolition of the canteen, "has the highest hospital record of any army in the civilized world."

Naturally there is a high hospital record, for the soldier, who would be content to take a temperate glass of beer in his canteen, is driven out by hypocrisy into a dive and made drunk by vile whiskey.

The Congress of the United States will continue to play the part of a hypocrite, OR IT WILL RESTORE THE CANTEEN AND THE RIGHTS OF THE SOLDIERS.

Our Mightiest Battleship

The spinal column of the American citizen stiffened with pride and thrilled with confidence as the North Dakota, mightiest of Dreadnoughts, swept in from her trial trip off the Maine coast.

The requirements called for twenty-one knots of speed. The great battleship made 22 1-4 knots with ease. There is 35,000 horse-power in the engines. The armor belt, of finest steel, is twelve inches thick. There are ten turrets against four on any other ship. Which means that ten twelve-inch shells can be fired every minute in broadside from the decks. The great ship fires five tons of steel projectiles at every broadside. Dewey's entire fleet at Manila fired only three.

There is not in all the world a battleship in commission that could stand for five minutes before this American Dreadnought—a product of Bay State industry.

Ten million dollars is the cost, and it is a craven soul that grudges the money.

There are two similar Dreadnoughts authorized by Congress. There should be ten.

The latest American battleship is the mightiest war machine on all the seas. The naval supremacy now should never be surrendered.

Here's to the North Dakota. May her magnificent tribe increase!

Fortunately for the ears of the public, neither the Pole nor Mt. McKinley can do any talking.

Professor Lowell, who has a copyright on all news from Mars, says the Martians are digging more canals. We find one as much as we can manage.

The Sun says: "The great heart of Massachusetts seems to have no uncontrollable yearning to beat against the tropic bosom of the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge."

Some one must say it, so here goes—Brother Duckery will lend color to the mayoralty campaign.

Shake the moth balls out of those evening clothes, brother. Grand opera has come to Boston for the Winter.

Hortensia and the Triumvirs

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

THE Eternal City was in a whirl of excitement! There had been nothing like it since the day on which it was proclaimed, "Hannibal is at the gate!" Nobody walked, nobody was calm—every one ran, screeched, was crazy.

And what might the trouble have been? A very great trouble, indeed. Fourteen hundred women, the richest and most prominent in the city, were to march, as March hares, and the atmosphere of Rome was literally snapping with the electrical fire of their wrath.

The Second Triumvirate (B. C. 43) had just been formed, and Octavius, Antony and Lapidus, the three gentlemen who had made up their minds to divide the world between themselves, were very anxious to get hold of the money with which they might crush the Republican forces under Brutus and Cassius.

Accordingly, an edict was published ordering some fourteen hundred of the richest women of the city to make a valuation of their property and to contribute to the representatives of the Triumvirate such portion of it as should be required.

Such was the move which started the excitement referred to above. The women were indignant at the promulgation of the edict, and resolved to resist the enforcement to the last ditch. In fact haste they appealed to the sister of Octavius and to the mother and wife of Antony, but their sisters at court either could not or would not do anything for them, and they made up their minds to march in a body to the Forum and enter their protest in the very faces of the Triumvirs themselves.

But imagine fourteen hundred angry women all talking at once!

That would never do. They must have a spokesman. Some one of their number must face the three high-headed gentlemen and their henchmen there in the Forum and tell the story of their wrongs.

But who should it be? The succession was of short duration. Up rose Hortensia, the daughter of the great orator Hortensius. She would be the Voice of the Grand Dames of the Eternal City.

And well did the daughter of Hortensius do her work! "Let war with the Gauls or Parthians come," she said, "and we shall not be inferior to our mothers in zeal for the common safety; but for civil war may we never contribute. We cannot assist brother to slay brother."

Straight from her womanly heart came this eloquent protest against fratricidal strife, showing that from the earliest time woman has ever been on the side of humanity and decency.

But Hortensia had not emptied her quiver by the discharge of this arrow; she had others to send. Having denounced the inhuman and unnatural proposition that the women of Rome should be taxed to support a war of brothers, the speaker threw at the Triumvirs this bombshell of a question:

"Why should we pay taxes when we have to part in the honors, the commands, the statecraft, for which you contend against one another with such harmful results?"

As has been said by another, "It was Hortensia who enunciated upon this occasion, for the first time in history, the principle of 'no taxation without representation.'"

We Americans are justly proud of our "Boston tea party" and our Declaration of Independence, but it may be well to remember that the immortal principle on which the tea party and the Declaration rest did not originate with us, but was first proclaimed, so far as we know to the contrary, in Rome, 43 B. C., by Hortensia.

The historian informs us that Hortensia's speech made the Triumvirs exceedingly angry. The thought that they had been bearded in their den, and that by a woman, was more than they could bear with calmness and dignity, and they ordered the police to drive the fair speaker and the other women away.

It is pleasant to reflect, however, that even in that rough and brutal time there was in humanity a sense of chivalry and fairness. While the police were driving the women off a mighty growl arose from the multitude outside, which so influenced the Triumvirs that they promised to postpone the consideration of the matter until the next day.

When, the following day, the judgment of the Triumvirs was rendered it appeared that a large portion of the proposed tax had been cancelled. The women had won. The eloquence of Hortensia, backed by the growl of the multitude, had done its work.

TAKE BACK YOUR LOOP OF BRASS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

IN far away New Hampshire, in a church all old and gray,
A yokel and his future boss were there to wed one day.
He reached into a pocket and he handed out a ring,
The fair young bride inspected it, and gave her head a fling.
"I'm gol dern happy, Emeline," he said to her just then,
"I'm pesky glad to know that I'm the happiest of men."
She weighed the ring a moment on that bright November day,
And, handing it to Hiram, she disdainfully did say:

CHORUS:

"Take back your loop of brass, dear love, take back your loop of brass;
What made you think that you could bunk a bright New England lass?
I don't mind artificial flowers, or gilded picture frames,
But men that buys brass wedding rings can't change no ladies' names!"

The poor New England yokel crept in silence to his home,
Reaching there in the gloaming, which had just begun to gloam
He went and hanged himself that night upon a rafter high,
Because he was a German and was not afraid to die.
He left this plaintive message: "Tell her I lost all hope;
She called my ring a loop of brass, I've used a loop of rope."
The cruel, heartless little bride went to a convent straight,
And often thinks of what she said to him who met his fate:

CHORUS:

"Take back that loop of brass, dear love," etc.

Back in the Limelight

By WEX JONES

NOW that the State election is over, the temporarily eclipsed dance back into the limelight.

The hero of the gridiron again gets his photograph in the papers. He is armored from ankle to neck, and on his face wears a delightful scowl, suggestive in a faint way of his appetite for gore and his yearning for the crack of skulls. Or he is shown poised on one toe, while his other foot is raised toward the zenith, and surrounding type tells how he can boot the ball ninety yards without apparent effort.

Beside this fearsome sight appears the well-fed face of a tenor who has come to renew his triumphs. Needless to say our tenor has discovered a new singer who will some day, he hopes, rival himself. It is a coal passer of the Boatic. The great tenor heard him singing as he passed the coal along and started. "Ha! It is the voice magnifique." The coal passer is to be given a musical education in the sacred cabse of art, and if you don't believe it here's a photograph of a man who looks as if he might be a coal passer. What becomes of all the pins is, however, an easy question beside the question of what becomes of the coal passers who are to be given musical educations.

Also appears a large diagram consisting of a white circle traversed by dark wiggly lines. Underneath is the information that this shows the canal system of Mars, the heavy lines showing the newly discovered canals. It seems that whenever a Martian feels the need of a little exercise he goes out and digs a canal from the North Pole to the equator, if that's what they call those localities on Mars. Then some astronomer down here spots the new ditch and announces that owing to a quake on Mars we may expect rainy weather for three weeks. And at that he's just as likely to be right as any other scientist.

There also appears a picture of a large face apparently about to fly into pieces like a bursting bomb. But this appearance is deceptive. The face is really doing nothing more than showing a benignant smile. This is the man who is to force acknowledgment of the supremacy of the white race by jolting its fat into the countenances of a large black man. Should the large black man refuse to be jolted properly and go so far as to propel a few jolts in the other direction Caucasian supremacy will be in a very doubtful condition.

However, shoot the spotlight all around.

Two Cardinals' Views

By ALICE STONE BLACKWELL

Cardinal Gibbons says, "Woman suffrage would be the death blow of domestic life and happiness."

On the other hand Cardinal Moran of Australia writes:

"The woman who votes only avails herself of a rightful privilege that democracy has gained for her. No longer a mere household chattel, she is recognized as man's fellow-worker and helpmate, and endued with public spirit and intelligence. As a mother she has a special interest in the legislation of her country, for upon it depends the welfare of her children. She should deem it one of the grandest privileges of her sex that she can help to choose the men who will make the laws under which her children must live, and exert her purer influence upon the political atmosphere of her time. How can she sacrifice any dignity by putting on her bonnet and walking down to the polls? The men about the polling booth show the women every courtesy, the officials are anxious to make things easy for them, and the whole business of voting does not occupy more than five minutes. The woman who thinks she makes herself unwomanly by voting is a silly creature."

Cardinal Gibbons has never had a chance to see woman suffrage in practical operation. Cardinal Moran lives where women vote.
